

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

When the author commenced his collection of texts in Congo languages and of books and articles dealing with the tongues of the Congo Free State, he had no idea of the amount of such material. Few of the works listed in this bibliography have been actually recorded. The only significant list heretofore printed is the section "Linguistique," in Wauters' general Bibliography of the Congo. That list is the foundation upon which the present catalogue has been built. The only other sources from which any serious amount of material has been secured are the various bibliographic lists of the British Museum and the catalogues of the British and Foreign Bible Society and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. All these together have perhaps yielded less than one-half the titles here presented. The others have been secured by diligent search through sales catalogues and references contained in special publications, and by conversation and correspondence with missionaries. Although the harvest is unexpectedly large and actually of respectable amount, it is no doubt still far from complete. It is recognized to be inadequate in three directions; in these it is likely to be considerably extended by later workers.

a) While diligent efforts have been made, both in Belgium and in the Congo Free State, to secure complete information regarding the publications of the Catholic missions, the result is disappointing. A considerable number of these works are listed, but probably one-third the total number are lacking. A single example will illustrate our difficulties. At Ki-Santu there is an active mission press but neither letters to the mission nor hours of search in Brussels have enabled us to secure copies of its publications or information regarding them.

b) Some of the most interesting items in the list are books printed in Lisbon. The work of the earlier missionaries is perhaps fairly represented. So, too, there is a moderate harvest of nineteenth-century writings. But there must be a considerable number of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century works in Portuguese, that are not here mentioned.

c) A notably interesting group of books probably exists which are not at all represented here. There are many manuscripts in the Swahili language, written in Arabic character. These are of local production; the work of Africans for Africans. Some of these manuscripts have been reproduced and printed in Germany. It is quite possible, even probable, that some such texts, Swahili in Arabic character, have been printed in Zanzibar or elsewhere within the Swahili area. When at Stanley Falls, the author tried to learn of such books. He was assured that the Koran at least exists printed in Swahili in Arabic character, but was unable to confirm the statement.

Robert Needham Cust, in his Modern Languages of Africa, accepts a division of African languages into six groups. Three of these groups are represented within the limits of the Congo Free State—the Negro, the Bantu, and the Pygmy groups. Practically all the titles in our list represent the Bantu languages. Only a few articles deal with the Negro and Pygmy languages of this area.

Our intention has been to confine this study to the geographical limits of the Congo Free State. A few articles dealing with African languages in general are included because the points therein discussed are applicable and interesting to the student of any Bantu tongue. Extra-limital Bantu works are for the most part excluded, but a few which treat of the whole family and one or two specific discussions are introduced, because they have been especially used by writers upon Congo languages and have had definite influence upon their studies. We have included Mbundu, although the language is largely extra-limital to our field. This is because much early writing relative to the languages of this region does not clearly distinguish Mbundu and Kongo and because Mr. Bentley, in taking the language of San Salvador as the type of the Kongo proper has already entered the area of Angola. It has seemed well then to include all available references to Mbundu. The Swahili language is spoken over a large part of the Congo Free State as a trade language and many Swahili texts, for use in the neighborhood of Stanley Falls, have been prepared within the State by both Catholic and Protestant missionaries. We have therefore included in our list Swahili texts wherever published, even if intended specifically for use at Mombasa, Zanzibar, etc.

We make no judgment of values. Some of the books and articles herein listed may be worthless. Unfortunately there has been no agreement between writers upon the use of a scientific alphabet for writing native words. There have been bitter controversies and differences of opinion. Men who have studied the same language for years are often in disaccord upon important points. No one questions

Krapf's competence in Swahili and yet Steere bitterly criticized his work. New missionaries rarely find the translations and grammars of their predecessors good enough to use and proceed at once to prepare new works. A missionary to whom a title was submitted for translation replied, "I could make a guess as to its meaning, but should prefer not to do so as I might be mistaken." Yet he worked in the same field and used the same language as the missionary whose work was submitted. For practical ends of instruction such a condition is serious. To some degree these disagreements and discords are due to local dialectic differences in the language. To a greater degree, no doubt, they are due to lack of scholarship in the workers. However, to the bibliographer every title is important; to the linguistic student even a bad piece of work may be of use.

It was intended to present brief biographical notices of the authors quoted. To do so would unduly delay publication. Portraits of a considerable number of authors are introduced. The basis of selection has been arbitrary—that the person should be responsible for three or more items in the list. It is fully recognized that a person, who prepares a single piece of work, may be a better student and a riper scholar than another who writes ten. On the whole, however, repeated performance indicates a depth and persistence of interest which warrants and demands recognition. While we are able to present a considerable series of these portraits we regret the absence of such as de Clercq, Büttner, Seidel, and some others. It is with particular satisfaction that we are able to use a recent portrait of the veteran worker, Robert Needham Cust, author of The Modern Languages of Africa, as a frontispiece.

It will be easily appreciated that contributions are appearing with such rapidity in this field that no list can be actually up to date. The presses at Matadi, Bolobo, and Bongandanga are constantly at work. Since the bulk of this list was ready a new press, that of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, has been established at Bolengi. The British and Foreign Bible Society, the Bible Translation Society, and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge are constantly sending new translations to the press. We make no claim for completeness in our list of mission publications later than the year 1906.

Among the languages here represented, three have been most diligently studied—Kongo and Mbundu, Bangi, and Swahili. The earliest to occupy attention was Kongo and Mbundu. Probably Pacciono's Gentio de Angola, 1624, is the first book in any Bantu language. Brusciottus' Reglas appeared in 1659. Grammars, dictionaries, and texts had all appeared before the seventeenth century ended. Between this early period of activity and the later one beginning with the coming of the Protestant missionaries about 1879, there was a long period of at least comparative neglect. Recently scores of works have been produced covering a wide range of subject and treatment. Bangi has been diligently worked through a period of fifteen years, chiefly by Whitehead and Scrivener, and may be said to be developing almost a literature. But of all African languages, Swahili has had the most remarkable history. Like the Kongo and the Bangi, it has a large missionary output, due to both Catholic and Protestant workers, and including grammars, dictionaries, and texts in plenty; it has the largest series of school textbooks—readers, grammars, histories, arithmetics, geographies; native stories have been translated into English, and English stories have been translated into Swahili. But Germans have done for Swahili what no one has done for Kongo and Bangi. They have lovingly studied its poems, its stories, its narratives, and have prepared a scholarly and appreciative literature regarding them. Not only has Swahili come into contact with European tongues and letters; it is today written by thousands in Arabic character. The Germans have reproduced and published some of the Swahili-Arabic manuscripts. The missionaries have been driven to print hymnbooks and gospels in Swahili, in Arabic character. Most curious of all, because of the contact between the Swahili and Hindus, there is a Guide to Swahili, printed in the Gujarati character.

The titles in this bibliography are arranged in alphabetical order according to authors and translators. Each work is numbered. The title is printed, divided into lines as on its title-page, whenever the compiler has been able to see an actual copy. Titles in European languages are not translated. Where the translation of titles in Congo languages is known it is given within square brackets. Where a translation cannot be given but the content is known, this may be stated in parentheses. Works that have not been seen by the compiler are indicated by the sign °. Those that are in his private collection are marked with *. The list of titles under the heading "Anonymous" might have been greatly lengthened as a large part of the mission texts are printed anonymously; wherever the name of author or translator could be learned, however, titles have been placed under it. Owing to the incomplete system of description in many dealers' catalogues, it is possible that some duplications occur, but it is hoped that such are few. Some books by explorers and travelers, given in this bibliography, exist in several editions and in translations into various European languages. Such works usually deal but incidentally with language and it has not seemed desirable to duplicate references by including different editions.

To facilitate finding of special works two indices are added. The arrangement of the text obviates the necessity of an index of authors. In the writing of language names we have followed Cust and Stapleton, who dropped the prefix indicating people or language. The prefix for people is Ba, Wa, or A. Thus the Baluba speak the Luba language, the Wanyamwezi speak the Nyamwezi, and the Azandeh speak Zandeh. Whether Bobangi and Lokele should actually be treated in the same way seems to us questionable, but we use the terms Bangi and Kele. In characterizing subject-matter we employ the terms suggested by Cust and use the abbreviations he uses—Grammatical Note (G. N.), Grammar (G.), Vocabulary (V.), Dictionary (D.), and Text (T.). To these we add Schoolbook (S.) though we are often at a loss in distinguishing Schoolbook (S.) from Text (T.).

We are under many and serious obligations. All the missionaries whom we have met have given us ready assistance. Special thanks are due to Mr. John H. Weeks, Mr. W. Millman, and Mr. A. E. Scrivener. To the American Baptist Missionary Union we owe the portraits of Messrs. Clark, Leslie, and Richards. The directors of the presses of the Swedish Missionary Society, the Baptist Missionary Society and the Congo-Balolo Mission have been liberal with copies of press work and with information. The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge supplied copies of their great list of Swahili texts at membership prices. Mr. Croyden Edmonds of the British and Foreign Bible Society has been exceptionally interested and helpful. Mr. Alexander J. Rudolph of the Newberry Library in Chicago has placed valuable bibliographical resources at our disposition. To the Newberry Library also, by the courtesy of Mr. John Vance Cheney, we are indebted for the opportunity to reproduce the title-pages of rare works belonging to the Eames and Prince Bonaparte Collections.

The author will be glad to receive corrections and additional titles. He will also be pleased to secure copies of those numbers that are lacking in his collection.

CHIEF PRESSES AND THEIR OUTPUT

AMERICAN BAPTIST MISSIONARY UNION: 334, 383, 410, 419, 422, 484.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY: Friends of the Congregational Church at Bromley, Kent, supplied a press and outfit. Later Josiah Wade of Halifax presented two presses:

1891: "Hannah Wade Press," of which Mr. A. E. Scrivener was placed in charge. At first at Lukolela, it was removed to Bolobo in 1895.

—: "Edwin Wade Press," at first at Underhill, later at San Salvador.

Since the "Hannah Wade Press" was removed to Bolobo, Mr. Whitehead has conducted a personal printing establishment at Lukolela, which turns out an excellent quality of work.

Another Mission Press of the B. M. S. is located at Wathen, in connection with the great boarding school established by Mr. Bentley.

The early issues of these presses were small—a few hundred copies. Many of their recent books for use in schools on the Upper Congo are printed in editions of four, five, or six thousand copies. Many title-pages bear local names (Monsembe, Upoto, Yakusu), although the books were actually printed at Bolobo.
